I do not know if the open-hole mounts are specific to the transaxle mount, or if they are specific to the A5 Jetta, but for those, use the 30 mm long 12 X 1.5 mm insert. Supposidly you don't need to use thread locker on the insert, since the insert tool rolls the threads and locks the insert in place, but it can't hurt.

The bolts for the motor mount are one time use, they were probably reused when the timing belt was changed. Deiselgeek.com sells a repair bracket for the broken ear on the block. You would be better off finding a TDI guru from the list on this site to do the repairs, most VW dealers don't have anybody as good as them. I would not use the one that did the timing belt as it seems they don't know ...
